Do not worry about tomorrow, for tomorrow will worry about itself. Each day has enough trouble of its own.

GRIEF WORKSHOP

A flyer for our upcoming Grief Workshop is enclosed in this bulletin. We ask that you give it to someone you think might be benefited by attending.

You might wonder why we are having it at this time of the year. The holidays are very difficult for those who are grieving. Thanksgiving and Christmas are about family and friends and being together. Many will face these holidays with voids in their lives due to losses they have experienced.

Death is not the only reason people grieve, however. Grief is a result of any significant loss. The list of reasons why we grieve would include divorce, the loss of health or a job, a child leaving home, the fracture of a relationship, a move from a familiar and beloved place—and the list goes on.

Furthermore, we can grieve before the loss in anticipation of it. Many think about what might happen and grieve about that.

When these things are considered, it is easy to see why grief is so common and why most of us are grieving about one thing or another.

I have presented this material dozens of times and in at least eight states. It comes from my own personal experiences with grief, as well as study I have done.

This workshop will give us the opportunity to reach out and minister to those about us in a significant way. Please plan to attend yourself and pass the word on to others, also.
