FIVE RULES TO HAPPINESS

On February 19 Stan Mitchell passed away. I did not know him, but he was a beloved professor of Bible at Freed-Hardeman University in Henderson, TN.

Mitchell was especially known for his good humor, his generosity, his dedication to the Word of God, and his love for teaching and his students.

Soon after his death, the list below began to circulate. It was written by him in January of 2018. It is certainly worthy of our consideration.

Here are five rules to happiness from Stan Mitchell.

- 1. It's good to say, "Thank You." For maximum effect, say it in a card.
- 2. Listen to people you don't have to—children, the elderly, students.
- 3. Forgive. You have a choice, either forgive or have no relationships. There is no third option.
- 4. If life, you will be hurt by the unkindness of others; do not lower yourself to their level.
- 5. Cherish the people in your life; the day will come (perhaps quickly) when they will be gone.

The printing of this list gives new meaning to Hebrews 11:5b, doesn't it—"... he being dead still speaks."
